WEST HOLLYWOOD (November 2025) - Visit West Hollywood showed its commitment to the legacy of rock & roll once again at the annual Rolling Stone UK Awards which took place on Thursday, 20 November 2025, at London's Roundhouse, sponsoring the Icon Award for the third consecutive year. This year's Icon Award honoured the world-renowned Irish rock band, The Cranberries, who were frequent performers in West Hollywood during the height of their career.

The awards, hosted by British actor Danny Dyer, brought together the best in music, film and entertainment at London's Roundhouse. The night featured a special one-off performance from The Cranberries' Noel Hogan and Australian duo Royal Otis, who went viral recently with their cover of the band's hit single 'Linger'.

Visit West Hollywood hosted product managers and entertainment bookers, alongside influencers and media, at the event, with the guests enjoying an evening of live performances. The collaboration highlighted the strong entertainment connection between London and West Hollywood, showcasing it as the West Coast's creative city and preferred place to stay for the travelling entertainment community.

Visit West Hollywood's President and Chief Executive Officer Tom Kiely said: "We are beyond thrilled to be continuing our partnership with Rolling Stone UK for the third year of their prestigious awards. Supporting the Icon Award highlights our long-standing dedication to honouring musical and cultural legends that make their way through West Hollywood. West Hollywood truly is the centre of LA's entertainment district and we look forward to working more deeply with the trade in 2026 to promote overnight stays and itineraries that showcase the best of West Hollywood."

Rolling Stone UK publisher Darren Styles OBE said: "We are proud to continue our collaboration with Visit West Hollywood. Their expanded support, sponsoring both the Icon Award reflects their passion for honouring the transformative power of music and culture. West Hollywood's legacy as a hub for innovation and self-expression creates such synergy with the Rolling Stone brand, making them the ideal partner to help us spotlight those who are dedicated to shaping the creative world."

With countless legendary artists gracing West Hollywood's renowned stages, from the Troubadour and The Roxy Theatre, to the Whisky a Go Go and beyond, sponsoring Rolling Stone UK's Icon Award goes hand in hand. West Hollywood is the cultural epicenter of LA and the stomping ground of music legends and welcomes all of our entertainment partners to West Hollywood in 2026 and beyond.
